

Educational Philosophy and Moral Authority – two essentials for educational leadership

Bruce Murray

Bruce Murray's thoughts on the critical importance for school leaders of, on the one hand, developing a personal educational philosophy, and on the other, maintaining and enhancing the gift, given by a school's community, of moral authority, come out of the practical lessons learned from a quarter of a century of senior leadership. He was DP and then Principal at Naenae from 1977-1989, and Principal at Tawa College from 1989-2002.
